

Music Synthesis department will change its name to Electronic Production and Design

Source : Academic Affairs

Effective January 1, 2010, the Music Synthesis department will change its name to Electronic Production and Design (ELPD).

Dear Colleagues,

Effective January 1, 2010, the Music Synthesis department will change its name to Electronic Production and Design (ELPD). The new name more accurately represents the department's mission, curriculum, and learning outcomes for students and graduates, while also providing strong support for professional trends in the music industry.

There will be more detailed information about this change in upcoming articles and public events. Official college information and communication areas are working now to make adjustments in Web, Colleague, and business formats, and the Spring 2010 Registration Manual will also reflect the change and use the new ELPD prefix in course numbering.

Thanks for your support and enthusiasm,
Stephen Croes
Dean, Music Technology Division
